

IMPORTANCE OF VOTING A STRAIGHT REPUBLICAN TICKET AT FALL ELECTION IS STRESSED AT MEETING OF GOP WOMEN

Forum Meeting Proves Interesting and Instructive To The 200 Men and Women in Attendance — Mrs. John W. Cooper Serves As Moderator — Noted Men and Women Speak.

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 1—The importance of voting the straight Republican ticket at the November election, regardless of what the results of the May primary election may be, was emphasized Thursday night by several speakers at the "Town Meeting" forum of the Bucks County Council of Republican Women, at the Country Club.

Approximately 200 men and women attended the forum, which was pronounced one of the best programs ever presented by the Council. The moderator was Mrs. John W. Cooper, past president of the Council. Members and guests were welcomed by the Council president, Mrs. Norman W. Lear.

Members of the panel included Mrs. Hannah M. Durham, Allentown, legislative chairman of the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women; Congressman Franklin H. Lichtenwalter, of the Lehigh-Bucks district; State Senator Edward B. Watson, of Mechanicsville; Republican County Chairman A. Harry Clayton, Doylestown.

In answer to a question placed in the forum question box as to whether a primary contest upsets party harmony, Mrs. Durham answered:

"Not necessarily," she replied. "The fight is on issues rather than personalities, and after the primary, I am going to vote the straight Republican ticket, whoever the candidates may be."

Mrs. Durham's remarks before the open discussions, were particularly timely and forceful. She first paid a tribute to the late Mrs. Henry A. James, whom she said, was "the greatest woman I ever knew." She gave the major portion of the credit to the late Mrs. James, for the solid organization work in the early days of the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women.

"It is up to the women of Pennsylvania to bring out of the Republican primary in May, the very best ticket to defeat the Democrats in November," Mrs. Durham advised. "Pick the candidates of experience and the right temperament — and most important, the men of integrity. The best ticket must be elected if we expect to win in November."

Mrs. Durham spoke of "National Policies and Issues" and paid a tribute to Congressman Franklin H. Lichtenwalter, who recently announced that he would not be a candidate for re-election.

"Bucks and Lehigh counties have been very fortunate in having Congressman Lichtenwalter represent our great district," she said. "The Republican who has been advanced as a candidate at the primary as his successor, is also well qualified. "The Republican Congressman from Lehigh-Bucks district is a very important legislator in Washington, for his election votes are usually with such a fine majority that he is not affected by any pressure groups."

Mrs. Durham spoke of the present national budget and displayed a huge U. S. budget book weighing as much as three large telephone directories. She illustrated her description of the budget with a miniature replica of the Empire State Building in New York, which was dwarfed by eight stacks of make-believe money.

"We don't know what Russia is doing behind the Iron Curtain, and cannot do much about it, but we can do something about this budget of President Truman's. The dangerous thing is that Russia knows all about that budget and all about us."

Mrs. Durham declared that politics today is a grim job and that our responsibility in seeing to it that Republicans get control is the only conceivable way that this country will be saved from bankruptcy.

"If there are some hard feelings after the May primary in Pennsylvania, and the Democrats get in next November, it will have a terrible effect on all of the American people," Mrs. Durham declared. "For that reason alone, it must be a case of 100 per cent unity after the primary."

Congressman Lichtenwalter was assigned no special topic. "I regret very much that I will not be your candidate this year," the popular Bucks-Lehigh Representative said. "You have been most kind to me in two elections, and this was the most important issue."

STATE HAS 5-POINT FLOOD CONTROL PLAN

To Minimize Damage and Save Millions of Dollars Annually

30 CONTROL PROJECTS

Following is the second in a series of three exclusive articles by INS outlining the state's flood control program and spotlighting the roles played by the federal and state governments.

By Al Spivak
INS Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, Apr. 1—(INS)—Pennsylvania today is following a five-point flood control program to minimize damage and save millions of dollars each year.

It embraces (1) regulating construction of bridges, dams, and other man-made obstructions along streams (2) collecting rainfall and stream flow data in conjunction with the U. S. geological survey and using the information in designing flood control works (3) cooperating with the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers in construction of federal flood control works (4) removing flood debris and undertaking channel rectification work on tributary streams throughout the state, and (5) keeping alert to possible danger.

Flood controls used by the state embrace reservoirs, consisting of a dam and storage lake, levees, dikes, channel improvement and diversion works.

Flood control works at Sayre and Athens were completed in 1949. According to the Department of Forests and Waters the program at Patton is 70 per cent complete and additional projects are under study. By the end of 1950, a department representative says, several more Pennsylvania towns will be protected against floods.

One dam expected to be completed this year is on Shawnee Creek, which feeds into the Raystown branch of the Juniata River, two miles south of Schellsburg in Bedford county.

Another is on Little Pine Creek.

ANNOUNCES HIS INTENTION OF BUILDING A TRANS-STATE SUBWAY THROUGH THIS SECTION; PROBABLE CHARGE TO BE 25 CENTS FOR 300 MILES

By John McCafferty
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LOLLIPOP, Pa., Apr. 1—(INS)—A bewhiskered recluse emerged from obscurity today declaring that he intends to build a trans-state subway through Pennsylvania.

Wrinkled yet spry, the oldtimer, who called himself Lipra Loof, said he will finance his proposed scheme with "a few billion which I have hidden in my cellar."

Loof, walled up in his shanty at Lollipop for the past year, declared:

"To prove I'm no miser, my first million passengers will get free rides."

Explaining why he wanted to construct a subway extending from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh—a tremendous span of more than 300 miles, Loof said:

"The notion just came over me. For years, people called me a miser. I suppose they have been right and I'd like to reform."

White-haired Loof said he has hidden inside his somewhat dilapidated home since last April because his neighbors always peered him. "They called me a 'Scrooge,'" he said, "because I never spent money remodeling my house." He added: "Yet, I was content the way I lived. Folks just didn't understand me but I hope they will think better of me now that I'm going to give them a low-cost subway."

Loof claimed that after his f. o. b. riders are taken care of he probably

FASHIONS SILVERWARE AS CLUBWOMEN WATCH

Small Silver Disc and Wire Emerge As Jelly Spoon and Bracelet

50 AT MEETING HERE

Emphasis was placed on the American Home at the meeting of the Travel Club yesterday, when Mrs. George E. Boswell, chairman of that committee, presented a unique program, proclaimed by many as one of the most interesting of the club season.

Against a background of three tables—one set with heirlooms of Bristol families, another an Easter table, and the third filled with tea-time items from countries around the world—silver was fashioned by the guest speaker. Members were intrigued, not only with the work of the silversmith, Mrs. William Slepik, Philadelphia, but with the countless items in silver, brass, china, linen, which beautified the display tables. There was an Easter air over all, the tea table having an Easter centerpiece; and the Easter table featuring one large and three small eggs, each containing a spring-time picture.

Mrs. Slepik's display of silver and enamel-ware in display cases were much admired; and as 50 women watched she cut sterling wire of different types, stamped it with her trade-mark and the word "sterling," twisted the pieces to desired shapes, fashioned a tiny "bowl" from a silver disc, hammered this, soldered where necessary—then passed about the room for inspection of all the completed spoon, and a child's bracelet. Mrs. Slepik held up for all to see the squares or discs of silver, copper, pewter and brass used to make various items for the house-hold or to wear as jewelry. She mentioned how metals can be combined for good effect in trim, and explained how in making metal pieces mistakes can be corrected.

Her display included some "spun" silver pieces such as bowls and cigarette dishes; miniature items, scatter-plms made from old watch cases, the pins with wearers' signatures on same, enameled pieces, etc. Other hand-wrought silver displayed included pieces made by Mrs. George B. Hood and Mrs. Theodore B. Megargee, Sr.

Mrs. Hood and daughter Martha, in mother-daughter costumes of yellow, (as was also Martha's doll) made their way to the Easter table. Mrs. Hood explaining the picture eggs fashioned from the plastic

Passover Feast To Be Observed Starting Today

Passover, the Jewish festival of freedom, commemorating the deliverance of the Jewish people from Egyptian bondage, will be observed by thousands of Philadelphians, beginning at sundown today.

Dedicated to ideals of freedom, the observance will be celebrated by Orthodox and Conservative Jews for an eight-day period and by Reform Jews for seven.

Passover is a time of rest and joy, thanksgiving and refreshment of the spirit. During the celebration, unleavened bread, or Matzo, is eaten. This symbolizes the bread of slavery eaten throughout the years of the Hebrews' sojourn in Egypt and in commemoration of the fact that at the time of the exodus from Egypt, the Israelites had no time to leaven their bread.

For Orthodox and Conservative Jews, the first and last two days are Holy Convocations, when work is prohibited. For Reform Jews, the first and last are Holy Convocations. During the interim, it is permitted to carry on daily business routines.

Legion Auxiliary Aids Hospitals, Salvation Army

Fourteen members of American Legion Auxiliary gathered in Robert W. Bracken Post home, last evening, for the advanced April meeting.

Mrs. I. Johnston Hetherington, Sr., who presided, called for committee reports. Among these was the remembrance of members with "get-well" and sympathy cards. Coupon chairman, Mrs. Robert Rue, reported sending 773 coupons to the Coatesville Hospital project, and to this unit added $5 cash donation. Afternoon card parties sponsored by the unit will raise money for cigarettes to be sent to a veterans' hospital. One of these will be at the post home at one p. m., Tuesday next, the public being invited.

Donation was made toward Easter candy for Coatesville hospital patients; and $5 toward the Salvation Army. Other donations were for child welfare and rehabilitation.

On Thursday, April 20th, Bristol Auxiliary will entertain Montgomery-Bucks Council of American Legion Auxiliaries in Bristol Presbyterian Church. Reservations are to be sent to Mrs. Fred Bryner by April 17th.

At the local unit's May session, members of the local chapter of Gold Star Mothers will be guests, with ways and means committee members as hostesses.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. I. J. Hetherington, Jr., and Mrs. McKinney.

CENSUS TAKERS START ON BIG JOB TODAY

They'll Be Ringing John Q. Public's Doorbell From Now On

ASK FOR COOPERATION

Census takers are off today on the biggest nose count in American history.

They'll be ringing John Q. Public's doorbell for the rest of this month to get the answers to a variety of questions—64-dollar ones and otherwise.

The identity of the enumerators in this area has not been made known. Neither has the day that enumerators will visit certain areas been revealed.

Census officials are hopeful that the enumerators will find a fully cooperative citizenry.

They need to know just how many people go to make up this great American public, what they do for a living and how the population is distributed geographically.

Specially recruited census takers, numbering 145,000, will visit every home and farm in every state and territory to do the job.

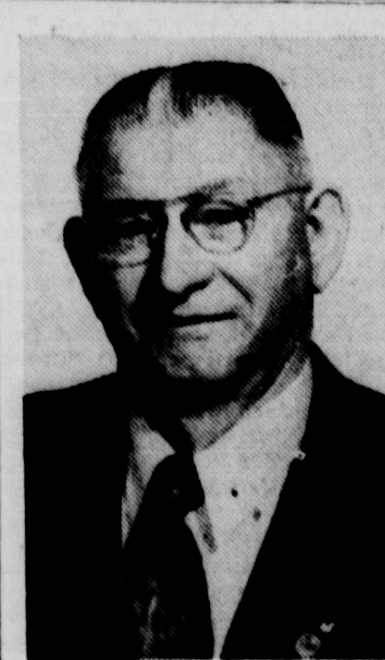

They can be identified by special cards and questionnaires, supplied by the census bureau.

In most cases they will ask no more than two dozen questions. Some selected citizens will have a few others to answer. Farmers have the biggest job. For them there's a special questionnaire with some 50 blanks to be filled.

If a citizen doesn't want to disclose the facts to a census taker for personal reasons he may mail his answers directly to Washington.

But under law he can't refuse to cooperate.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Walter Kiernan
(Distributed by International News Service)
By Walter Kiernan

Today is April 1st but when that fellow at the front door asks your age it's no joke.

No manual has been prepared for the citizenry but generally speaking you need not invite the census taker to dinner, show him pictures of the baby or offer to check the information he has on your neighbors.

But to make the interview as painless as possible it is suggested that where it is raining or snowing the census taker either be invited to step into the hall or under your umbrella.

And we should remember at all times that he is a fellow citizen, a representative of the Government and therefore a good Democrat.

France just finished a census and found that she has 2,000,000 more women than men. This is the first encouraging surplus of anything France has had in several years.

Asked for comment on this surprising development, the director of the French census said "My comment can be put into a very few words. Oo La La!"

MORE AND MORE CARS

A great many men in business and financial circles will be surprised if automobile sales in 1950 do not hit a new high. There are 10 cars now for every 11 American families, and by the end of the year the figure may reach 11 for 11. The number of families having two cars will offset the number having no car.

At the end of 1949, there were 35,700,000 passenger car registrations in the United States. That was approximately 10,000,000 more than on V-J Day, and 6-000,000 more than on Pearl Harbor Day. The war made little change in the automobile-owning habits of Americans.

Average retail prices of automobiles rose by 68 per cent, but average family incomes rose even faster. Families with incomes ranging between $3,000 and $10-000 a year spend approximately 10 per cent of their incomes on the purchase, operation and maintenance of cars.

There has been one change, though. The average car is a bit older than was the case 10 years ago. In 1941 it was five and one-half years. Shortly after the war it was nine years. Now it is eight years. This will be whittled down somewhat, but the average may never be as low again as it was in 1941. Better car balance, better roads and better maintenance have made cars more durable, and the war taught millions of Americans that cars do not wear out as fast as they thought.

The immediate outlook is for a prosperous future for the automobile industry.

A candidate for governor in Alabama, a staunch believer in the power of suggestion makes backdrop resembling the state capitol. This is a good idea if it

END OF THE TRAIL

It is one of those paradoxes that the death of one of this country's best known big game hunters should have been caused indirectly by a taxicab. Frank Buck, who died in Texas, had been in declining health since an auto crash in Chicago three years ago. Sorrowfully it can be said that a machine did what no wild beast could do.

Frank Buck's life was one that everyone dreams of emulating.
From the time he was 18 he had roamed the earth in search, earlier, of adventure; later of wild animals from the farthest corners of the earth. To millions he became known as the man who could "bring 'em back alive."

What a slogan that was! It immediately conjured up in the minds of young and old alike a man in whipcord breeches, boots and sun helmet, tanned face and neat mustache. He became the mold, in effect, for jungle hunters.
Two generations have known of Frank Buck. Like the late Edgar Rice Burroughs, who died a few days earlier, he brought home the breath and substance of far-away lands and made them familiar to everyone.

Questioned as to how he could finance such a costly project, Loof maintained:

"I have a few billion hidden in my cellar. I have been saving it for years."

He insisted that he "never stole a penny of it, either," then added:
"Of course, all my money isn't good. Some of it is Confederate money which I've been saving as a souvenir. Then, I have a few thousand in ancient coins, too."

Loof recalled vividly the day he earned his first wage. He concealed his age but said:

"I started out as a barber. My first customer was a fellow by the name of Sampson. He never got his hair cut, just wanted a shampoo."

"But that's impossible!" someone suggested.

"No, it isn't," Loof countered.
"You see, I have a secret for long life. I only live one day a year."
A twinkle in his eye, Loof explained:
"I always liked living on April 1.
I guess any fool would. Oh, yes,

"I thought, the other day, for instance, that the Republican candidate for Governor from the coal regions, had been picked by a New Deal group."

"I want to impress upon you as Republicans, regardless of the primary, that we must keep our eyes on the one, big, important thing—the Democrats. They are the real enemy in November."

Taxes and finances were discussed by Senator Watson. He also described how a bill becomes a law in Pennsylvania, the workings of a caucus, and other details necessary in the passage of a bill.

Senator Watson said that the various appropriations have all been spent and that much good has been accomplished.

"Many groups want many more things, but we must remember that it is the people of Pennsylvania who have to pay the bill," Senator Watson said.

Senator Watson said that the taxpayers will be paying for the General State Authority of $175,000,000 for the next 38 years.

"Many of the expenses incurred," he continued, "remind me of buying fur coats for our children to pay for—charging it to the youngsters. This is the first biennium in the his-

Importance of Voting A Straight Republican Ticket At Fall Election is Stressed

"I can assure you however that I am not going to give up politics and I will continue to fight for the best in politics. In the candidacy of the men selected to run on the Republican ticket in May, you have a four-square gentleman with excellent experience, well-trained in good government."

Congressman Lichtenwalter spoke of the "uncertainty of things in Washington."

"We are moving at a snail's pace today compared to the 80th Congress," he declared. "It is important that we get control of the 82nd Congress, and I have hopes that we can win enough seats in the House to control the 82nd Congress. This looks quite possible right now."

Congressman Lichtenwalter said that he has always supported the Marshall Plan bill but that this year he could support only certain portions of it.

He reported that there is some "slight evidence of economy" in Washington at the present time, that is heartening, but not enough of it.

The Congressman said that when Ireland and even Spain are trying to "get in on the Marshall plan," he thought that it was going too far. "I do not personally feel that at this time, America can withdraw from under this program, but there are certain parts of it—Korea for instance—which I do not like," Congressman Lichtenwalter added.

The fallacy of federal housing was mentioned by the Congressman who realistically described what it would mean.

"We are running at loose ends today," he added. "Let us keep our eye on one goal—the defeat of the Democrats in November!"

"Squabbles in our own house are good but I always have and always will despise a smear campaign to win any political fight, and therefore I sometimes become alarmed at any serious internal strife."

"I thought, the other day, for instance, that the Republican candidate for Governor from the coal regions, had been picked by a New Deal group."

"I want to impress upon you as Republicans, regardless of the primary, that we must keep our eyes on the one, big, important thing—the Democrats. They are the real enemy in November."

Taxes and finances were discussed by Senator Watson. He also described how a bill becomes a law in Pennsylvania, the workings of a caucus, and other details necessary in the passage of a bill.

Senator Watson said that the various appropriations have all been spent and that much good has been accomplished.

"Many groups want many more things, but we must remember that it is the people of Pennsylvania who have to pay the bill," Senator Watson said.

Senator Watson said that the taxpayers will be paying for the General State Authority of $175,000,000 for the next 38 years.

"Many of the expenses incurred," he continued, "remind me of buying fur coats for our children to pay for—charging it to the youngsters. This is the first biennium in the history of the state that the budget has amounted to a billion dollars."

Senator Watson said that in the public expenditures of the State at the present time, 49.39 per cent goes for public education, and 40.38 per cent for public health and welfare. He spoke of the investigation now under way in the State, by plain-clothes officers, who are running down unemployment relief chiselers.

"When this story breaks shortly, it will rock the country," Senator Watson said. He cited an instance where one man with nine children living in Pennsylvania has already drawn $70,000 relief, and has two automobiles.

"Are we going to have a 'new deal' ticket in November or are we going to insist on officials who will not stand for any additional taxes?" he asked.

"Organization, Local, County and State," was discussed briefly by Republican County Chairman Clayton, who explained the method of election of county committee members and other workings of the party in the county. Chairman Clayton explained that anyone interested has the privilege of attending a caucus and advancing any candidate for office that group might favor, but he explained that committeemen and women are always contacted first.

In answer to several questions, Congressman Lichtenwalter said that in his opinion he could not continue to support the present farm support bill as it is today.

As to the Federal Aid Bill to education, he said that "it is just waiting to be decorated with lilies." He said the religious controversy was the hardest blow to this bill. There may be a school construction aid bill come out of the whole affair, he said.

Elected to the office of vice president is A. F. Hunsberger, of Quakertown. Joseph Kunsman, Ambler was re-elected secretary, and Gerald Detweiler, of Upper Moreland, was re-elected statistician.

A request was made by a representative of Jenkintown high school, to be re-admitted to the conference for basketball competition, a request that was turned down as a result of a secret vote taken by the school representatives.

Jenkintown recently dropped out of the Bux-Mont Conference, giving as a reason that the student body was too small to compete with other schools in the conference.

A United States Army "M. P." and another soldier, who claimed to have been AWOL from Fort Dix, N. J. for some time, are in the Bucks County Prison, Doylestown, on a charge of stealing an automobile belonging to Joseph Jesiolowski, of Kintnersville.

The accused soldiers are Joseph Morris, 18, and Robert Dayer, 18, both of Phila.

According to Troop J. J. Shovelin, of the Doylestown sub-station of State Police the Jesiolowski car was stolen by Dayer and Morris on March 23, from the parking lot of the Durham paper mill as the two soldiers were hiking back from Pittston.

Trooper Shovelin said the soldiers drove the car to Philadelphia and parked it near the home of one of the soldiers and that both would a Pine River tributary, three miles north of Waterville in Locoming county.

Protection works are turned over to local communities for maintenance and operation, with state engineers making frequent inspections.

There are 39 flood control projects in various parts of the commonwealth, according to Everett Bourquard, chief of the state's flood control division.

But flood control is more than dikes and dams. Assuring adequate woodlands and forest areas are regarded as a primary step. And stream clearance projects also are tied in.

Forests and Waters Secretary M. P. Draemel has credited the $35,000,000 Schuylkill river cleanup program with lowering the flood plane of the river and making formerly undesirable sites suitable locations for industry.

The first result of the Schuylkill river project, said Deputy Forests and Waters Secretary E. S. McCawley, will be relief from the enormous cost of flood damage by improvements of the floodway and clearance of channel and bank obstructions.

State regulation of man-made obstructions is termed a vital part of the flood control program by Thomas H. Mathews, chief of the encroachments division.

Included among these obstructions, says Mathews, are bridges, retaining walls, wharves, and docks. The state's water and power resources board must issue permits before they may be constructed.

Flood warning service also is to be considered with the subject of flood control. The service maintained in Pennsylvania has been termed one of the best of its type. Its function is to sound an alarm, should floods seem imminent, so that precautions may be taken.
